MEADOWBROOK-HUNT SCANDAL.

Partridges-Reducing the Death Rate at Jerome Park-Militiamen.

NEW YORE, December 3.—We read with condemnation about those Romans who de-cided, by a turn of their thumbs, that vanquished gladiators should be killed by vic-torious antagonists. But are we entirely entirely innocent of wantonness as to human life in our diversions? Six jockies have been dain in Jerome Park for the entertainment of fashionable New York. The track there has eight sharp turns instead of four, because the course is bent in an eccentric man-ner round a bluff on which the Club House stands. It is here, directly in front of wealth and refinement, that the riders are slaughtered. They are thrown by the horses that fall in crossing and recrossing the track where the inner rail becomes the outer one for a short distance, thus mixing and crowdthe contestants. The loss of life has at length ed the managers, and an improvement for safety, because that could not be done without destroying the knoll on which for tune's favorites gather, separate from, yet close to, the common thousands of spectators. jockey will still be killed once in a while, but not so often as formerly.

Steeple-chasing by amateur riders has at least the recommendation that the horsemen and horsewomen take the risks of the sport. It has been extremely fashionable autumn. It has also given rise to a comical disturbance. The Meadowbrook-hunt is the most pretentious of these organizations. The members assemble near Garden City, the Long Island property of Alexander T. Stewart's widow, don the scarlet coats and Stewart's widow, don the scarlet coats and drab knee-breeches approved by English usage, and race on horseback over fields and through woods, accompanied by venturesome belles. Their last meet was followed in the evening by a supper in their club house, the host of the occasion being the noted wit, Bill Travers. Sufficient wine was drank to make a great deal of merriment. After the desert, the women retired to another apartment to ively row took place instead of the exected joviality. As the women were going out, somebody struck up the familiar chorus, "Good night, ladies." As the reader will remember the quoted phrase is repeated several times, followed by the line, "We're are going to leave you now." In instance it was paraphrased to, "You're going to leave us now,"
to suit the fact that the women were the ones' who were retreating: and then the ensuing words were altered to "Merrily you'll roll along, roll along, roll along," while the company rolled illustraively like intoxicated persons from side t ively like intoxicated persons from sale side. The whole thing was done in a rollick ing, careless spirit, and the rolling was possi bly meant, though without any intention to be unpleasant, as an intimation that the women had drank their full share of the and that the women had in no single case be come perceptibly tipsy. However, young August Belmont, son of the famous million-aire banker, and brother of Congressman Belmont, got furiously angry on the spot leaped on a chair, denounced his companions as blackguards, and declared that they had insulted his wife. The chorus ceased in-stantly, and silence for an instant betokened the amazement of the party. Then some of the tellows rejoined, and a fist-fight was only revented by the interference of Travers.

"I'll ki-ki-cuff the fi-fi-first ke-ke-cub that raises his p-p-paw," he cried, in his inimitaand his threat had a quieting effect. Next day the Meadowbrook-hun formally resolved that Belmont should apologise or be expelled. He resigned his office

He sometimes goes to Washington-Market in person, to select whatever noveld ties and extras may chance to be on sale. The other day he saw there, hanging in a poulterer's stall three pairs of partridges, He had reason to be sgitated by the sight. "How much are they?" he asked. "Two dollars a pair," was the reply, they are very peculiar—I never saw any just like them—and I don't think them dear at that price."

"Dirt cheap." exclaimed Lorillard; "I paid six dollars a brace for them a year paid six dollars a brace for them a year ago."

So he had. They were genuine English partridges, and he had imported them as an experiment in acclimatization. They had been loosed on his extensive farm in New Jersey, and he had actually paid the pot hunter of that neighborhood $5 a month not to shoot them, but somebody bagged and marketed them in spite of all precautions. It is remarkable of some of the chief social diversions that the foremest men in them are really there for gain. The pitiful downfall this week of General Alexander Shaler is an illustration. He had for twenty years been an ardent military man, ostensibly for anusement, beginning as a captain in the proud Seventh and becoming a general of a brigade. His real pursuit was of a remunerative office, however, and his zeal as a militaman was merely meant to force him, as it man was merely meant to ferce him, as it did, into positions with good salaries. At length regular wages failed to satisfy him, and he grabbed public money in the purchase of armory sites, for which he is now to be of armory sites, for which he is now to be tried as a common robber. Even the famous Colonel Clark, of the Seventh, is kept in the Health Board through his influence in military circles, and it is true of three-fourths of the city regiments that their commanders are holders of salaried public places by reason of their militis influence. It is to be hoped, however, that Shaler is an exception among them in outright dishonesty. But their principle seems a little awry.

The late Horace Greeley once said that, in his estimation, the man who remained sober while carousing with a party of minicry with which he appeared to be fuddled, while actually as sober as a judge, was clever comedy. Starting in with his victims thus advantaged, he was still alert when they became witless; his entertaining powers made him hail-fellow with them, and before morning he got off with some of their watches and wallets. They were too muddled to even suspect him, and it was not until the operation had been repeated half a dozen times with different parties that the thief was pronounced guilty. But he is nowhere to be found for punishment.

In the way of imitation jocosity, nothing has ever exceeded that with which Henry E. Dixey, the actor, boomed himself in this city during the first year of the run of "Adonis," the burlesque in which he appears. There used to be a time when the glamour of the stage extended to the perglamour of the stage extended to the per-formers personally, and an actor was some-thing different and superior to other men in some eyes. Their common-place doings commanded space in the newspapers, and late as the period of Jarrett & Palmer's conspicuousness in the business they paid Colonel Joe Tooker a hundred dollars a week to put matter in the way of reporters. In that was matter in the way of reporters. such matter in the way of reporters. In that manner "The Black Crook" and ensuing spectacular enterprises were foisted upon public attention. But awe of theatrical peoe seem to be dissipated, and it requires an ple seem to be dissipated, and it requires an intrinsically good story to gain space in columns that possess any value as a medium of catching the popular fancy. The aggregate length of military telegraph lines now operated by the signal service is 2,779 amusing devices they got into the papers constantly. Dixey was the sole gainer, because every mention of him was in effect so much fame for his "Adonis," while Mackay was out of an engagement in New, York. Well, "Evangeline" was recently revived for a long run, and Mackay was hired for the Notary. He naturally thought that his turn had come, and he expected that his compatriot Dixey would resume operations with him. Not so. When they get a fuddled chap they never let him escape if they can help it. If he hasn't money enough to satisfy them, they will pull a locket off his chain, or twist a stud from his shirt. They are shrewd enough to never steal a thing of sufficient value to start the police on their track. A few days ago some triends of mire ways a steak hap ago some friends of mine were at the Battery, in a hurry to get up to Thirtieth street. They hailed the first cab which came in sight and were driven at a queer sort of speed to their house. Here one of them hurried indoors. house. "What's the fare?" asked the passenger.
"Four dollars," piped the boy promptly. Four what? "You'erd what I said—dollars? It costs "You'erd what I said—dollars? It costs four fat dollars, and nothin' less."
The man selected a two dollar bill from his pocket, rumpled it up and tossed it on the seat beside the boy. Then he turned on his heel and started toward the house, but he his neel and started toward the house, but he had not gone three steps before the weazened faced little cab-driver was beside him, pouring a volume of vituperative abuse in his ears. There is no Assistant Secretary of War, and it is necessary for the proper transaction of the public business that there should be such an officer. The daily routine in relation to the affairs of the army, and the direction of public works, the settlement of claims, and other duties required of the Secretary of War under special provisions of law, and in addition thereto the supervision and regulation of the clerical force of this department, numbering 1,750 employes, impose an amount of work which organized, legally vested with authority to assist the Secretary in the performance of these duties, while his temporary absence, under present conditions, often results in WASHINGTON, December 5.-The annual report of Secretary Whitney shows that the amount of appropriations available for the year, ended June 30, 1885, was $13,485,-537.33. The estimates for the navy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887, amount 40 $35,104,695.15, in which sum are embraced estimates for new objects, not those ordinarily for the service, amounting to $16,069,-950.24, leaving for the customary purposes of the service $19,034,744.91. In reference to the strength of the navy, the Secretary says:

"At the present moment it must be conceded that we have nothing which deserves to be called a navy. The highest official authority in our service said in 1876: There is no navy in the world that is not in advance of us with regard to ships and gure and I. of us with regard to ships and guns, and I, in common with the older officers of the service, feel an anxiety on the subject which can only be appreciated by those who have to command fleets and take them into bat-

NEW YORK, December 5 .- Two trains on the Brooklyn Bridge Railroad ran into each other at 9:15 o'clock this morning, and in the smash up six persons were badly injured. The failure of the grip was the cause of the accident. It happened at the hour when the cars were most crowded by the stream setting toward New York, and run with the least headway. The rain increased the crush at the Brooklyn entrance, and when a two-car train started out from the Brooklyn termi-nus it was loaded to its utmost capacity. The platforms of both cars were packed The train had gone to within 150 vards of the Brooklyn tower when the grip on the cable gave out and it came to a stop, then, back down the incline, first slowly, then with increased speed until it swept round the curve near the Brooklyn end at a terrific rate of speed.

Another train had just left the Brooklyn platform and caught on to the cable when the preceding train was seen to display danger signals. It stopped promptly and began to back toward the station. But it was too late. The disabled train came thundering down the incline, diminishing the distance between them with every second. THE GALE AND SNOW.

Tremendous Wind on Lake Michigan Fears of Marine Disaster.

CHICAGO, December 5.—The weather here this morning and throughout the Northwest generally is clear and cold. Here the mer cury indicates 23° above zero. The storm last night raged in a fearful manner on the lake, and it is feared that there was a great deal of damage done to shipping. Four or five vessels were discovered off the mouth of the river this morning, having been unable to make port on account of the heavy sea, and the further circumstances that their rigging could not be handled by reason of the heaving coating of ice which completely Great anxiety has prevailed in marine circles about the schooner Bay State. She was bound for Muskegon and State. She was bound for Muskegon and was three days overdue. Dispatches received from Grand Haven this morning announce her safe arrival at that port. It was reported last night that Captain Mann, a vessel captain living at 105 Eighteenth street, was missing. The name of the vessel he com-manded could not be learned, but his friends say that she had started fitteen days ago on a trip which should take but forty hours, and had not yet been heard from.

The storm last night beat up a tremendous sea along the lake shore. The waves ran exceptionally high and falling on the heavy planks of the break water broke them up like tinder. The Illinois Central tracks are protected by the break water, which is about one hundred feet away. The waves broke over this, and at Thirty-first and Thirtyninth streets washed away the outside track for several hundred feet. At Twenty-second street the outside track, which is protected by two break waters, was also washed away. At St. Paul this morning the therm stood at zero.

The storm yesterday extended all over the Northwest. It was a regular blizzard and in many places stopped business and the running of cars. Mrs. Green, of Riverview, Kan., was killed by a flying board. A gale is reported from Aspinwall and it is feared many lives have been lost on the coast.

Baldwin has been appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Baldwin's term of office will begin with the new year, but will practically have charge of the company's Indiana passenger fairs from and after December W. M. Mr. Baldwin, his successor, will have charge of the passenger business throughout the State, except in New Albany and one or two other river towns.

Peru & Chicago. ion of the Indianapolis, Peru & Chicago Road, is in the city to-day perfecting ar-rangements for the beginning of a new and progressive era on the L. P. & C. It will be seen from what follows—all of which was obtained from Mr. Davis—that the I., P. & C. is to swing out from the dominat dependent roads, operated chiefly in the in-terests of Indianapolis and the owners of the road. Mr. Davis, while in the city, will close the lease of the apartment in the Bates House now used for a billiard hall. In this

Scott, general agent of the bondholders of the three divisions of the road, comprising the line from Michigan City to Indianapolis, is equal with Superintendent Stevens, of the Wabash, in the management of the road. We rent the rolling stock from the Wabash for an agreed price, and are operating the three divisions of the road between Michigan City and Indianapolis independent of all other lines and relations, The probabilities are that when we obtain a final decree early in the next year, that the three divisions will be brought in by the bondholders and consolidated. The interests of the three roads are so intermingled that of the three roads are so intermingled that consolidation will be the natural course to pursue and can be accomplished without

"No; there will probably be no connection between the two whatever."

The trustee has made arrangements to reseatablish the I., P. & C. as a Chicago line. A traffic agreement with the Michigan Southern has been entered into, whereby through cars from Indianapolis will be hauled by way of Laporte or Michigan City to Chicago. Another important negotiation, looking to the running of these Chicago I., P. & C. cars through to Louisville, over the J., M. & I., has about reached a favorable termination. Mr. Davis had no doubt that the arrangements for a through line from the lake to Cincinnati will thus be consummated. Negotiations with the Chicago & West Michibetween the two whatever.

Angements for a through the from the lake to Cincinnati will thus be consummated. Negotiations with the Chicago & West Michigan Road have also been concluded for the establishment of a station near Laporte. With all that has been done and is in prospect, Mr. Davis says that the business of the road since it passed into the control of the bondholders has largely increased and that a good feeling toward the present management prevails all along the line.

The L., N. A. & C. has been given thirty days to vacate the premises now leased from the I., P. & C. (Wabash). The bondholders of the I., P. & C. say that the Air Line (L., N. A. & C.) has used the facilities leased from the Wabash to knock the I., P. & C. out of its legitimate business. The Air Line officials are in the city to-day looking for other quarters. The I., P. & C. will perhaps consent to a modification of the present lease temporarily, but as the Air Line is an opposition line; it believes that is perhaps consent to a modification of the present lease temporarily, but as the Air Line is an opposition line it believes that in giving them quarters at any price it is virtually giving aid and encouragement to the enemy. TROUT FINED $500 AND COSTS.

If This Bind of Treatment is Kept Up, ne City May Soon be Rid of These Pauper-Breeding Deadfalls.

The case of W. P. Trout, the lottery vender, was given to the Criminal Court there was a verdict of guilty, the sentence imposing the full limit of the law, which is $500 and costs. Judge Taylor, in his charge to the jury, went over the ground ex-haustively, and he reasoned that a lotters haustively, and he reasoned that a lottery scheme and gift enterprise within the mean-ing of the statute is a plan, system, project or design for the distribution of prizes by chance; or, in other words, a scheme for the chance; or, in other words, a scheme for the division or distribution of property or moneys to be determined by chance among those who have taken shares or chances in the project. The jury included S. M. Patton, Thomas Brock, Cyrus Russell (colored,) Barney Kline, Thomas M. Snyder, George F. Haleman, Reubea Hendricks, J. H. Whisner, Carnelins R. Smock, John B. H. Whisner, Cornelius B. Smock, John B. Sullivan, George W. Spencer and William low $300. Trout was shown to be a subagent for Scott, who was an agent for Gray, the head center of this local lottery deadfall business, and who in turn professes to be employed by the Cincinnati Investment Company, which, if it exists at all; according to his own showing, is located in Kentucky. Gray was on the stand yesterday afterno and while he claimed that the company dabbled in produce and pork, and the returns to investors depended upon the company's profits and losses in that business, the thumbscrew of the prosecutor had to be applied to get any evidence out of him, and even then there was scarcely anything that could be made, available. At first he denied that Trout was an agent, but afterward he admitted that Scott was an agent, and that Trout was serving for Scott. Patrolman Page was the prosecuting witness, he having purchased that Scott was an agent, and that Trout was serving for Scott. Patrolman Page was the prosecuting witness, he having purchased the ticket direct from Trout, and Harding represented the State, while Judge Scott and Charley Cooper looked after the defense. The prosecutor, in his argument, summed up the situation in a nut-shell when he denounced this lottery deadfall as an educator of boys and young men into gambling habits, instilling into their minds the idea of getting something for nothing, and starting them on a road which led to the penitentiary. He also called for the full enforcement of the law if the defendant was found guilty. The heavy dose imposed by the jury made the defense gasp for breath, and as soon as the counsel recovered their wits they moved for a new trial. Still later they began talking of an appeal to the Supreme Court, claiming that this was a test case; and they were given until this afternoon to make up their minds. Meanwhile, Judge Taylor remanded Trout to jail until his fine and costs were replevined or paid. Following this, Judge Norton resumed the bench and ordered that the lottery case of Charles Watson be set down for trial next week; and it will be pushed for all it is worth. The one against down for trial next week; and it will be pushed for all it is worth. The one against Al Glazier will be nollied, there being no evidence to convict. A SPELL O' WEATHER.

The Wind Causes a Collision on the Big

Four Railway. The temperature last evening fell suddenly and rapidly, and during the night the signal service thermometer registered 21° above zero, the lowest point. The wind blew furiously, attaining for a short time velocity of thirty-six miles to the hour, and velocity of thirty-six miles to the nour, and averaging twenty-five miles. A slight rainfall turned quickly to snow and the ground was coated and frozen. The temperature tonight will probably fall as low as fifteen above zero. Indications point to a stormy night on the water-ways and the coasts.

Last night the wind did some little damage to chimneys and signs in this city, and north on the Big Four (C., I., St. L. & C.) Road, it caused the wreck of a passenger engine. Two cars standing on a switch, near St. Ann, this side of Kankakee, were blown by the force of the wind across the main track. The passenger train due from Chicago in this city at an early hour, ran into the obstruction. The engine was ditched, and the fireman, Louis Krintler, received painful but not serious injuries. T. Bassett, the engineer, was also slightly injured. The accident was unavoidable, and the damage caused was slight considering the danger. Rumers were affoat on the street that Krintler had been killed outright, but the railroad authorities say he will complete the run to this city on force of the wind across the main track

Every one who has had his hat blown off on the plaza in front of that edifice will appreciate its flavor and give it its merited place as a legend: The Devil (diabolus loci) was one day walking along Notre Dame street with a priest, boasting upon the extent of his power in this neighborhood. As they disputed they came to the church. "Come in," said the priest, "and I will show you that here you will lose all your power." The Devil consented, but, as he was accompanied by a wind, he turned to the latter and said: "You stay here till I come out." to-do farmer, who resides near Kokomo, went to Missouri to spend the winter, and has just been brought home by his grief-stricken wife insane and partially paralyzed. insane and partially paralyzed.

A mass meeting will be called at Shelbyville to take steps to erect an appropriate monument to the memory of the late Vicepresident. The intention is to place the monument in the center of the public square. Mrs. Jane Hampton, one of Wayne county's pioneer women, died last night, aged eighty-eight years, at the residence of her son, Mahlon, near Votaw's Station. The interment will take place to-morrow at Earl-ham Cemetery, near Richmond. Two weeks ago, George A. Hume, a merchant of Lewisville, married Miss Ella Nu-gen, of that neighborhood. Now comes Mrs. Cassie Pickering, a widow of Lewisville, with a suit against Mr. Hume for breach of promise of marriage, and asking for $5,000

In this connection, a democratic official who has, until recently, been opposed to Superintendent Lang's removal, remarked to a News reporter this morning: "I have changed my mind about that man. He has recently shown himself to be an honest and efficient Superintendent, and I believe he is in earnest in his efforts to enforce the law."

The School Board.

At the School Board meeting last night Secretary Thompson reported a total expenditure for November of $32,243.42. Treasurer Frenzel's report showed a balance of

J. G. Miller, a leading business man and overdraft of $46,019.75 in the function fund, giving a net balance of $12,405.76.

The superintendent of schools reported that he had issued instructions to teachers to the safe completion of the contract. He did not have money enough to speed the work, and importuning creditors harassed him to such an extent that life became unbearable, and, unable longer to face his troubles, he has left home and family and disappeared no one knows where. He leaves many other unfinished contracts, which will amount to over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

market has continued quiet but firm on very small fluctuations, and at noon is quiet and steady at prices at or near the opening figures. Under the new constitution, stocks now sell ex dividend regularly from the opening of the Board on the day on which the books close for dividend purposes. Under this rule, Northwestern, both common and preferred, has been selling ex dividend this forenoon, except the cash sales, which are dividend on. Indianapolis Wholesale Market. The good that may be said of the week's trade is applicable only to the fore part of the week. After Wednesday there was a heavy falling-off in the opening days of the week were so brisk that the aggregate trade is eminently satisfactory. In dry goods collections have improved a trifle, but there is yet much complaining. Copcessions are obtainable on job lots of prints and remnants, but the market, generally speaking, continues steady. Grocories quiet, with sugars fair; coffees steady; green foreign fruits weak; produce is steady at quotations. Iron quiet.

LADIES' TAILORING GOODS AT COST. On Monday, December 7, we will offer our entire stock of silk plushes, astrachans and other goods for ladies' outer wraps, etc., at net cost. We will sell goods by the yard and cut, or cut and fit, or make to order, at the option of the purchaser. This will give ladies the advantage of having garments made to their measure, thereby securing a perfect fit at lower prices than they can obtain the same ready, made. We make this offer for two reasons, one of which is to dispose of our stock before the season closes in order to make room for our spring dress goods, and the other to advertise our business, as it is not gen-erally known by those who have not called on us that we employ men in both our cutting depar

The People has raised a stir in saloon circles by claiming that the liquor applications of Fred A. Meyer, Henry Pohler, Martin Merritt, Louis W. Giberson, Frank P. Lehman, James Hamlin, Henry Guetig, Caspar Schmalhoz, Joseph H. Schaub and Walter W. Carroll have been illegally advertised.

During the excitement incident to the Hendricks funeral, an important arrest by Martin Powers escaped due attention, although it was noticed at the time. The fellow's name is Wagner, a hotel sneak, who is now doing a Work House act, together with his supposed paramour, a woman named Smith. She dressed as a widow in deep mourning, and if what is told of this pair is true, the capture by Powers came

R. A. Merithew, 171 Olive street, in connection with the general talk about natural gas, recalls the circumstance of a discovery of a vein made by him while on the flood relief expedition, three years ago. He first detected its presence near Rockport, in Spencer county, some distance from the river proper and close to the bluff, and he thinks if it was still further investigated that the find might prove of value gated that the find might prove of value. There were several places in that immediate vicinity indicating its presence in material

POINTS IN PARAGRAPHS.

A local jelly-maker who claims to manufacture pure and honest jellies has discovered a deception practiced by a competitor in an adjoining town. (All adulterations, of course, are of foreign origin, always.) The manufacturer referred to makes strawberry, quince, peach, black, raspberry and all other jams out of apples. This truit is the cheap-est in the market, "jellies," or "jams" well and is easily flavored with the article it is desired to imitate. A little coloring matter makes it red enough for strawberry, or dark enough for blackberry, as the case may be. A plentiful sprinkling of hay-seed is the ready substitute for the seeds of the berries, and a substitute that will deceive the very elect—that is those who are elected to buy ready-made jams—has been produced.

Dealers in roller skates are complaining. Dealers in roller skates are complaining. Well they may. Skates that sold two years ago for $5 and $6 are dear at any price now. The market has been supplied and the demand for skates is dying out. But the manufacturers had their sails spread while the breeze was brisk and many of them have made independent fortunes. The fancy rollers that have sold for $6 are said by a manufacturer to be made at a cost of 95 cents a pair—and there have been millions of pairs made and there have been millions of pairs made and "Hendricks was not only a distinguished citizen and a man whose memory is to be re-vered, but he was a great advertisement for the State and town." These were the words of a Meridian street wholesale dealer. "He was known all over the continent and even across the waters, and whenever his name was men-tioned Indianapolis or Indiana was coupled with it. Once I was down South. 'Where are you from? asked a man at the hotel table. 'From Indianapolis,' I replied. 'Ah! That's Hendricks's home. What a wonderful advantage it must be to live in the same place with such a man!"

The New Curtain at English's.

The new drop curtain was unrolled last night at English's for the first time, and it is a beauty. It was painted by Frank Cox, of New York, assisted by his brother, Ctark, also a scenic painter of rising note. It is a copy of a celebrated painting of ancient ome, by Turner, historically correct, and showing the river Tiber, looking down The castle of St. Angelo is on the right, in the distance, and the palace of the Cæsars on the left. There is a hazy sunset, Casars on the left. There is a hazy sunset, with a glimmer of light reflected upon the waters. The picture occupies a circle in the center of the curtain, and is mounted in representation of puffed white satin, suspended from heavy gilded corners of gilded woodwork in carving. The drapery is old gold satin, then a heavy blue plush draping, showing a turn-over of draped pink satin. On the outside corners is heavy crimson plush drapery, with gold fringe and gilded ornaments. Above the corners hangs naturally draped lace, and still above is crimson plush drapery of same fabric as that at sides. Across the bottom of the satin banner is a shade of blue, on which is painted a floral design, while the base of the curtain represents massive marble steps, on which is laid two widths of rich velvet carpet, with gold stair-rods. Last night the audience was quick to appreciate its general beauty, and the only criticism heard was made by Colonel Jim Durham, an art cynic, whe was inclined to thirt there was too much clim.

The Mænnerchor Fair. The Mænnerchor Fair, which is to come off Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week, promises to be an exceptional affair of its kind. The decorations will be surpassing in beauty and design. The fair is supposed to take place at Dresden, in the Park of August the Strong, King of Saxony. A beautiful drop curtain, representing the palace of the King, orilliantly illuminated, will occupy the rear of the stage; in front of this will be a broad and spacions terrace leading down to the park (the auditorium). Distributed about the park will be the different booths, in Gothic, Greek, Roman and Moorish designs. A museum of rare curiosities, an Art Gallery, containing some very valuable art treasures and a menagerie of excellent specimens will be among the attractions. The "grab bag" will be quite a feature, its foremost representative being a massive square walnut extension table, with Turkish cover and a full dinner set, 156 pieces, French china, Haviland make, of the celebrated straw-flower pattern. This display may be seen now in the show window of Mr. Albert Gall. A fine orchestra will be in attendance each night to furnish promenade music. of the stage; in front of this will be a broad

The Boston Councilmen and Aldermen who ttended Vice-president Hendricks's funeral had their expenses defrayed by a two-thousand-dollar appropriation, and after the funeral was over they were having such a good time that it was proposed that in returning home they should go back by New Orleans, and Sergeant-at-arms Peters was asked to draw a draft for enough money to cover their expenses there. The chairman of the dele-gation "kicked" against this, and for a time there was an effort to overrule his authority but he finally prevailed upon the party to return home by Chicago. St. Joseph's Church Mission. The mission at St. Joseph's Church will open to-morrow at the 10 o'clock high mass by the Redemptorist Fathers, Rev. Lanis Cook and Rev.
